Student Presentation Grading Criteria

CRITERIA	EXPLANATION	NOTES
SLIDE QUALITY AND ORGANIZATION OUT OF 2 POINTS: 1.5	• Clear layout and professional appearance (e.g., no typos) • Slides presented in a logical order • Correct and readable equations • Tables and figures displayed clearly	• Some text was a bit cluttered and there were cases where some longer bullets could be broken up into separate bullets or a bullet with supporting sub-bullets. • Tables and figures were generally displayed clearly. • Minor comments: Be consistent in capitalization; use of “&” vs. “and”; punctuation.
CONTENT MASTERY AND QUALITY OUT OF 6 POINTS: 5	• Accurate and clear presentation of research question, motivation, institutional background, prior literature, contribution, empirical strategy, data, and results • Demonstrates deep understanding of paper	• Needed a slide on contribution relative to related literature, esp. Currie and Gruber (1996). • Couple areas to sharpen/clarify (and see my notes on your slides themselves): ○ Describe the “simulated eligibility” measure as this is what they use to determine treated vs. control states. ○ Explain the detrending procedure (nice intuition provided on page 115). ○ When showing first-generation results, make clear that these bolster the credibility of the Currie and Gruber findings as they can more rigorously assess support for the parallel trends assumption (the addition of pre-treatment data is a big deal here).
TIMING AND DELIVERY OUT OF 2 POINTS: 1	• Key material covered in allotted time • Presentation is well paced and prepared	• Finished on time but there were occasional times when the pace seemed slow because you were trying to figure out what you wanted to say as you showed a slide. For talks of this length, you do not want to recite a “script” robotically, but more practice would help. At a minimum, I try to make sure I know the headline or one sentence takeaway for each slide. That way, if I feel like I’ve been unclear or fumbled through explaining something on a slide, I can always say something like “The main thing I want you to take away here is X, Y, and Z.” • More practice would have allowed you to cover the “simulated eligibility” measure in detail. • We all have a “filler” word we use in talks (“uh”, “um”, “right?”, etc.). Yours seems to be “ya know.” Just flagging this for you to be aware of. • On the positive side, you are clear and easy to understand and have an engaging style. That will serve you well when you begin presenting your own work.
